In this manuscript we propose a new semiparametric estimator for binary-choice single-index models which uses parametric information in the form of a known link function and nonparametrically corrects it. Asymptotic properties are derived and the finite sample performance of the proposed estimator is compared to those of the parametric probit and semiparametric single-index model estimator of Klein and Spady.