
STEPHEN FIENBERG, Carnegie Mellon University

Fraserian Statistical Inference

In statistics we often read of Bayesian Inference or Fisherian Inference, sometimes known as Fiducial Inference. But in Canada, over the past 60 years, we have observed the evolution of a related statistical approach rooted in the longstanding work of D.A.S. Fraser. In this talk we discuss some aspects of Fraserian Inference and its influence, including on the present author.